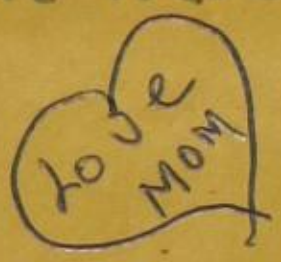
AURA - VOLUME SIX

There is a beginning -



Dear Benny,

To a really great guy, who I never will forget. I hope all your wishes come true in the future & I wish you all the luck in the world, especially, your "love" life. Please remember the fun we had in "Big Apple" especially the fun we had in "Big Apple". Keep in touch!

Love,
Denise

The Road

A long time ago, when there was a lot of trouble in the world, a ragged peasant heard his king say: "Don't worry. We're on the road to peace." The peasant was disturbed. If he was on the road to peace, why did he live in poverty, why were his children unhappy as others looked down on them? The situation was not improving. When he spoke to his neighbor, his neighbor advised "Go to The Great Teacher, he will tell you". The Great Teacher was considered to be the wisest man of the kingdom. He was also one of the most powerful and wealthy men. "All right", said the peasant. I'll find The Great Teacher and see what he says." The peasant searched for The Great Teacher and found him in his mansion. He explained his problem to The Great Teacher and the nobleman became enraged: "HOW DARE A PEASANT LIKE YOU ASK SOMEONE OF SUCH A HIGH POSITION SUCH A RIDICULOUS QUESTION!" The peasant was too frightened to speak. Then the Great Teacher did a strange thing. He looked at the peasant; he paced back and forth; he glanced back and began to speak; "Peasant," he said, "I find your question quite perplexing. Although I cannot understand how you could possibly have the gall to ask it, I will excuse that and propose the following: Together we will search to find the road to peace. But only under certain conditions. While traveling together, I will sleep in inns while you sleep outside. Secondly, you will eat only what I have left over. Thirdly, while we are traveling, you are not my companion, but my servant." The peasant agreed to this, and the next week the two set off together on a search that would eventually last three years — a search, all over the world, for the road to peace.

The first year they traveled over 1,000 miles, stopping at every village on the way. The peasant spoke to other of his kind, while the nobleman, spoke to other noblemen. The peasant followed the rules exactly, he carried all of The Great Teacher's baggage, acted as his servant, and slept outside. By the end of six months, the peasant's clothing was worn out, and the nobleman gave the peasant a set of his own clothes. "Even commoners won't look at the likes of you," The Great Teacher reasoned.

The second year was worse than the first. The peasant become ill and could not continue traveling. One night, the master let him sleep in an inn, and after a while the peasant slept inside each night. "If you become ill again, we'll be delayed more," said the nobleman. And they continued in that manner for that entire year, endlessly searching for the road to peace. The peasant continued to carry The Great Teachers' baggage, never complaining.

The third year began the same way. The two travelers were tired. The peasant was becoming very thin, so the nobleman gave him a larger portion of food. "If you die, I'll be responsible for you." They were able to travel 3,000 miles that year, because The Great Teacher bought two horses. After 10 months, they were so tired that they stopped at an inn for a few days.

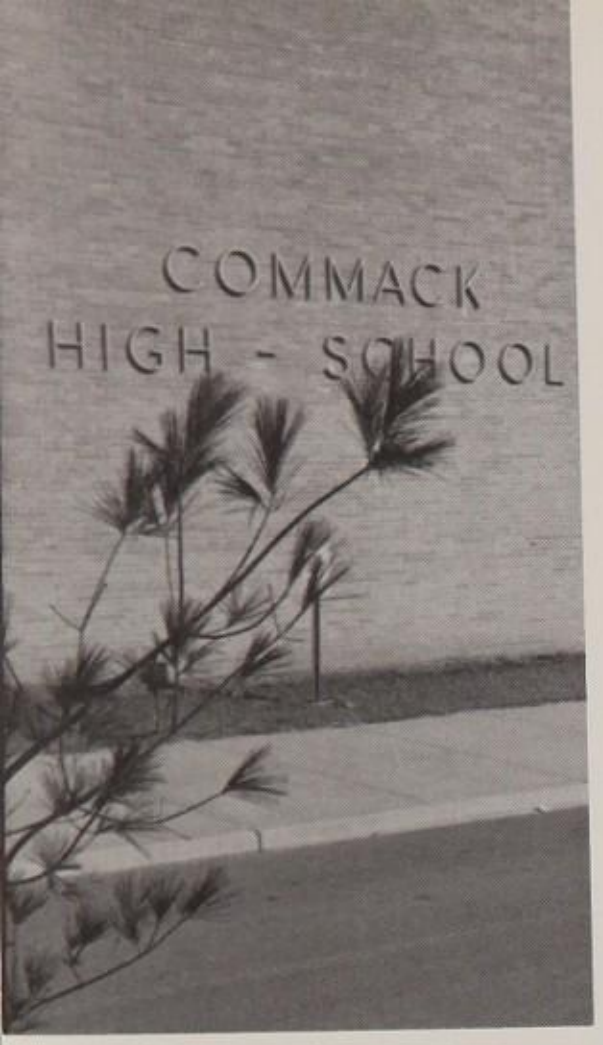
"Come in," offered the nobleman.

"All right. Tell me when you're done eating".

"You can eat with me."

"Oh, O.K."

"And we will be able to share a room from now on."



Within a few days, they set off again. The peasant picked up the baggage.

"Take your choice," said the nobleman. "Whichever baggage you carry, you may keep."

"Thank you," said the peasant as he picked up a bag.

I'll carry the other," said the nobleman, as he picked up the other bag.

"Let's go home," said The Great Teacher.

"What about the road to peace?" said the peasant.

"My friend," said the nobleman, "I believe we have found it."

Lincoln Center Project

Actors Playing New Roles as Teachers

On Friday evening, November first, the Lin tory Theatre presented their first performance f highlights of the evening were "An Evening w a new, one-act play never before performed fo a panel discussion about the project, in which invited to participate. After the show, we asl how they felt about the project in relationship community. We also asked them what they felt and what the future holds for this project. The praise from everyone we asked. One man told experience for the students." It's the sort of trai anywhere else. The fact that we have the Linc here is like having a goldmine close by."

One enthusiastic couple said, "The Commun it, the interest and appreciation of the work was to the people of the community to continue it i all for it!" Another couple told us, "We think i

Legacy

The year has made her will: she left to me
A private purse:
Silver and copper from the dogwood tree,
White gold from a torrent, amber from a pond
And, for my sadness' sake,
Mountains in a bluescape of beyond.
It might be worse:
These will be useful when I lie awake.

Head Attraction

If your chin recedes, avoid the style in which the hair is drawn straight back from the forehead. That creates an unflattering arc of your profile. Yet don't pile too much hair on the forehead. That would tend to make a small chin look even smaller by contrast. A soft, upswept wave is best. Your profile should expose as much of the cheek and jaw as possible. So wear the hair rather full behind the ears, leaving them partly uncovered. When your hair goes up, wear it soft on the forehead and quite low and full in back.

My Fair Lady

VOLUME 7, No. 5 COMMACK HIGH

"My Fair Lady" All It Promised To Be

By Ronni Diamondstein

"Wouldn't it be Lov-er-ly?" Well it was! The anxiety of the cast can now come to an end. Their final judgment has come with overwhelming approval.

My Fair Lady was a success, the sell-out audience itself indicated this. Their standing ovations and cheers were self-evident. The fine musical was a marvelous combination of singing, dancing, great acting, exquisite costumes, scenery and sincere effort and hard work by all participants.

— Pygmalion. Pat Carty, Professor Henry Higgins, was in fine form as the confirmed bachelor who was "just an ordinary man". Pat's acting as the stuffy phonetics teacher and singing were outstanding. Both Paula and Pat were members of the All-State and All-Eastern choruses which was exemplary of their fine singing. Bob Gooding also a member of those two choruses was simply dashing as the handsome and romantic Freddy Eynsford-Hill.

An excellent performance was given by Lonny Eagle, Colonel Pickering. Leave us not forget Mel Walker, drunken and riotous Alfred P. Doolittle whose great performance will not be forgotten. The sun certainly was shining on him. Kathy Milbauer was fine as the prime and proper Mrs. Pearce. Other outstanding cast members were Catherine Preston, Mrs. Eynsford-Hill, Diane Coller, Mrs. Higgins and Tom Sutter, Zoltan Karpathy. All in all the chorus and dancers were excellent. The show would not have been complete without the excellent job done by the orchestra.
